Sy.Med Development, Inc. Launches Human Resources Product Line, New Division

05.27.05, 9:45 AM ET

Sy.Med Development, Inc., a leading provider of credentialing software for the healthcare industry, announced today that the company has launched a new division, SyMplify Technologies. The new division will market a new product line called OneAppHR, a product designed to simplify paperwork requirements across all industries.

Designed for HR administrators who have to manage, secure and process growing volumes of employee data, OneAppHR is a business software product that combines a powerful HR information database with an innovative auto-populating feature that automatically completes any type of HR form.

"Human Resource managers using OneAppHR can utilize the product's database to store and secure all employee data in a single location. It offers functionality that includes a reporting package, audit trail, searchable database, user-defined screens, security, alerts and many other time-saving features to help improve productivity and efficiency," said Merle Glasgow, Vice President and Division Manager for SyMplify Technologies. "With a single mouse click, OneAppHR can instantly extract employee data from the database and immediately populate any type of governmental, benefits administration or internal document, regardless of the format or design."

The product can be tailored for any size business ranging from 10 employees to companies with 5,000 employees or more.

OneAppHR addresses, but is not limited to, the following types of forms:

- Government forms such as W-4's, I-9's and State New Hire Reporting
- Benefits administration forms such as health insurance enrollment, 401(k) administration, and other benefits-related forms and documents.
- Corporate/internal forms such as employee applications, security and building access cards, corporate credit card applications and personal information.

Completed forms can be processed electronically, or printed for traditional delivery. You can add forms as needed and further customize the solution to best fit your company's needs. Also, for those companies that have existing human resource information systems or are using HR outsourcing services, OneAppHR can be tailored to complement those environments as well.
